

NEWS

5th December 2017

Dance school dazzles with Bollywood moves at museum

By Anna Slater | @AnnaELGuardian

Head of News

The dancers at the event

1 comment

DANCERS celebrated all things India as part of a cultural event at a museum.

K'z School of Dance, based in Harrow, headed to the Science Museum for the British Council's UK/India Year of Culture exhibition.

The group were "honoured" to represent Indian culture and dance, with more than 20 of its dancers and performers performing "Illuminating India".

Kalpesh Zalavadiya, the founder director of K'z Dance Entertainment Ltd said: "We are very delighted and proud to have been part of this government project of British Council's UK/INDIA year of culture.

Attract your audience with the best RSS feed widget

Try for free

"Everyone, put in a lot of hard work and hours of dance rehearsals towards this incredible event took place at London science museum."

The event also included a segment on 5,000 years of science, innovation and photography.

MOST READ

COMMENTED

- 1

LTN consultation extended after 'technical issues' on council website
- 2

'Surplus' council properties to be sold off for cash
- 3

Testing for South African variant in Harrow to continue
- 4

HSBC branch in Kingsbury is permanently closing
- 5

Memorial garden completed as London marks anniversary of first lockdown